

HEALTH SCIENCE 1000 EQUIVALENCY AT COMMUNITY COLLEGES

Health Science 1000 is a prerequisite for the Bachelor of Science in Health Science program. This course includes student success applications, Medical Terminology, and health careers. Currently, there is no single course equivalent to Health Science 1000 at community colleges. However, the following course combinations would be considered equivalent:

* If the applicant does not meet the HSCI 1000 equivalent, at a minimum, the Medical Terminology course is required before beginning the program. The Medical Terminology course may be in-progress when applying to the program but must be successfully completed prior to the start of the program. The other components of the Health Science equivalency must be met prior to the start of the second semester of the program.

For a quick option in Medical Terminology, the California Virtual Campus offers courses starting soon. (Medical Terminology)

If your institution is not listed on the equivalency grid, please contact the Program Director, Mechelle Perea Ryan, at mperearyan@csustan.edu for further guidance.
